Michelle Wiznitzer-Arizona Birding From a Non-birder

Michelle Wiznitzer

Michelle Wiznitzer is a “snowflake in training”, practicing law in Chicago and photographing birds in Arizona. Enlisting the eyes and ears of the Valley’s finest birds, Michelle continues her quest to capture the perfect bird shot.

Raised in the southern Caribbean on the island of Curacao (Netherlands Antilles), Michelle longed to feel sunshine on her bones again and followed her heart out West to Arizona. It was here that she accidentally snapped her first hummingbird with her camera. She was instantly hooked. Michelle now ventures out far and wide throughout the State of Arizona to photograph our fine feathered friends. She hopes to capture them all....

Editors Note: I first met Michelle over a year ago when I went to the El Dorado senior living community in Sun City. She was giving a bird program to the residents and I had been invited there to view their facilities and sit in on the program since I was scheduled to also give one in the near future. I couldn't help but immediately have an affinity for this bubbly photographer and her knack of speaking. I asked if she would consider giving a program for our Chapter and she kindly said yes.

What's Happening in our Chapter

By George Wall

There was a Board Meeting on February 6, 2013. All of the Board members attended.

The January minutes were approved and the committee reports were given. On Membership, there are currently 811 members that included 154 Friends. There were no changes in the Trip and Program Committees. The Education/Conservation gave their report that all is set for the Girl Scout birding badge on March 2nd and April 6th. The financial report was given and approved. It was determined that we have enough (approximately 30) binoculars for this event.

A discussion was held on the nominations for the coming elections and Haylie Hewitt has stepped up to become our next President. See page 4 for the nominees.

The picnic is all set for March 23rd. A silent auction and a raffle will be held. We have a lot of items for both.

Karen LaFrance will be working on another Together Green Grant.

The February general membership meeting was held on the 13th. David and Diane Reesor present a great program Antarctic and South George. We had almost 80 people show up for the program and had to actually set up more chairs. They will be giving another program on Brazil next year.

New River Nature Preserve

Leader: Bob McCormick

mcbobaz@aol.com

Have you ever driven North on I-17 and wondered what that slender band of green is off to the East just past New River? Deeded to the Desert Foothills Land Trust in 1994, the New River Nature Preserve is a 20.8-acre habitat open during day-light hours to hikers and people on bikes or horseback. Bed-rock comes to the surface here bringing with it the ground water that allows a mix of fan palms, willows, mesquite, native walnuts, cottonwood, gum and sycamore trees to thrive on the perennial spring waters. Lucy's warblers, Bell's Vireos, woodpeckers, cuckoos, Common Black-Hawks and several types of frogs have been seen on previous trips.

You can park across from the mailboxes. There's room for about 3-4 cars. Do not block the private driveways in the area. From here, walk the dirt road straight ahead for about 0.1 mile, there will be a New River Preserve sign and a gate.

Book Review

By Evelyn Cheso

“Living in the Wind: Across the Hemisphere with Migratory Birds” by Scott Weidensaul is not a new book; in fact, it was written back in 1999. It can still be purchased from many places like Amazon for approximately $12.00.

It is a fascinating book on bird migration. It is very well written and includes details of raptors to songbirds in their migration from one continent to another. I highly recommend it to anyone interested in how our birds live and survive for these many thousands of years.

There are numerous recent praises for this book at many sites like www.goodreads.com. Check it out!

Biographies of the Nominees for Officers and Directors at Large for the Sonoran Audubon Society

The selections below were nominated by the Nominating Committee

- Haylie Hewitt (for President): Haylie is stepping up from being our Treasurer and Hospitality Hostess to become our President. Haylie has been a member of our Chapter for a little over four years. She became our Hospitality Hostess in 2010, and elected our Treasurer in March 2012. She had previously been appointed as our Treasurer after the prior one moved in November 2011. She has volunteered for many projects and festivals and has worked tirelessly to make our Chapter a better organization.
- Tim Cullison (for Vice-President): This will be Tim's second term. He has been a member of Audubon for more than twenty years and became active in the chapter after retirement. He is currently spending retirement doing community service with a special interest in kids including planning Girl Scout events about birds. He is the Publicity Committee chairperson and is on the Education/Conservation Committee.
- Jim Consolloy (for Treasurer): Jim just joined us as a Director at Large on the Board in the last election. Since there was a vacancy at the Treasurer's position, he was encouraged to fill it. He is almost a lifelong birder, but is also very knowledgeable in flora. His backyard was spotlighted in last month's issue of Gambel's Tales.
- Darnell Kirksey (for Director at Large): This will be Darnell's second term. She has been a member of Sonoran Audubon Society since it was founded. She is currently on the Program Committee and the Education/Conservation Committee. Darnell volunteers at the Hassayampa River Preserve where she regularly birds. Her love of birding began about 24 years ago after she bought an introduction to bird watching trip at a service auction.
- Andrée Tarby (for Director at Large): This is Andrée's second term on this go-a-round since she has served in the past. She's been birding for over 35 years and joined the Maricopa Audubon Society in the late 1980s. When the Sonoran Audubon Society formed, she switched to them. She is currently on the Trip Committee. She has been handling our door prizes along with many other things. She is a volunteer at the Phoenix Desert Botanical Garden where she leads bird walks on Monday mornings. She also leads bird walks at Estrella Mountain Regional Park on the fourth Sunday of each month as well as other field trips.
- Dr. Jerry Theis (for Director at Large): This will be Jerry's third term as a Board Member. He is currently employed at Banner Boswell Hospital as an Oncology Data Specialist. He has been birding since childhood. After birding Arizona, then the U.S., he now concentrates mostly on South America, having birded parts of Ecuador, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil, and Venezuela. He also has birded Bulgaria, Costa Rica, Jamaica, the Dominican Republic, Puerto Rico, and Thailand. His favorite bird groups are hummingbirds and owls.
- John Arnett, as a Board member, is proposed to be the Chairperson for the 2013-14 Nominating Committee and Karen LaFrance as a member of the committee.

What Makes a Backyard Bird Habitat

By George Wall

In the October 2012, Sonoran Audubon Society Newsletter, I talked about sources of water. This article expounds on that one. You want a water source for your birds and most likely it will be a bird bath of some sort or even a pond.

Bird baths can be made of many materials like a durable resin, fiberglass, marble, ceramic, metal (copper and brass are the best metal ones), or formed cement one. The ideal backyard bird bath would be a pond, and they can be cheap or costly depending on what you want. The one shown below is a 4 ft. x 6 ft. and 18 inches deep in the center. The cost is $150. This does not include the running fountain, the rocks and other things around it. The kit just has the lining and instructions. It's up to you to finish it, but that could be fun.

The drip system is one of the best ways to keep water flowing into a bird bath whether on the ground, on a pedestal, hanging down or whatever. You usually have some type of hookup going from a faucet to some type of tubing. The tubing can be simple like the one on the left or very decorative like the one on the right. The drip system keeps the water in motion which attracts birds and keeps the mosquitoes away.

Now we'll go to the opposite end of the spectrum. I really loved this picture that appeared in the May 2012 newsletter. It was taken in Dwayne Fink's backyard and it's so simple, yet so useful. It can easily be cleaned and also filled using a water can or rainwater if it's about to rain.

By George Wall

The water agitator is another way of keeping the water in motion. There even have solar powered ones. Some of them have a little electric pump so that when the solar power runs out, the pump takes over. The cascading water one is nice.

I like the one I have in my yard. It involves a small $20 electric motor that I put in my cement fountain. The fountain spray certainly disturbs the water and definitely attracts the birds. In fact, hummingbirds like to fly through the water. I have a 1/4 inch rubber tubing attached to one of my faucets running underground and into the back of the fountain. I turn the water on so that it only drips very slowly. The fountain sits on a simple rock/cement foundation that I easily made. I ran my electricity for the motor through a PCV pipe that I put underground from an outdoor outlet.

There are a few other things you should know about putting a bird bath in your backyard. You should pick out a location that is shady (mine is shady as soon as the grape arbor not too far away starts getting it's leaves. Also a big tree blocks the sun most of the time). Also, try to keep (as much as possible) the bird bath away from dropping leaves or clippings. At the same time, don't put the bird bath right near a bird feeder where seeds may fall in.

With all fountains, drippers or whatever bird bath you have, they will get dirty. The longer they sit there the dirtier they'll get and algae will start to grow especially in summer. That leads to the next thing – cleaning. I only clean my fountain once a month and even though there are algae at the bottom, it only takes me a few minutes of physical time. I put about three cups of chlorine bleach into the fountain and let it sit for a about three hours. Before I walk away for those three hours, I throw a small tarp over it so the birds won't get into the chlorinated water. After the three hours, I turn off the electricity to the pump and then use my shop-vacuum to suck up the water. I dump the old water and fill up the fountain again using a high-powered spray from my hose. This will dislodge anything stuck on the bottom or sides of the fountain. After the fourth fill up, the water is clear. To keep it clear, I use a product called Fountec which controls algae and is also a clarifier. There are some other brands that work, but I like this one the best and is safe for birds. I use 10 drops every week which keeps the algae from showing in the water. Even with the best of care though, algae will still grow on the bottom especially during the summer which is why I clean the fountain once a month.
