Our Members—Adventures in Bird Watching and What We Are About

This month’s program is an unusual one—it’s about our members and what we do in our chapter. Watching this program, I think you’ll get a better idea of what we are about.

Using photographs supplied by members or ones I took at various functions, you will learn what the Chapter and its members do. This program was designed for you our members. In it we have over 115 people pictured. Some of you submitted pictures or articles which are included under “Members Input”. In order to get as many people as possible in this program, I took photos from my albums that go all the way back to 2001 and put them into this program. It is broken down into eight parts.

1. Members Input
2. Important Bird Areas
3. Tres Rios Nature & Earth Festivals
4. Annual Picnics
5. Retreats
6. Special Events
7. Bird Trips
8. Spotlighted Members

What’s Happening in our Chapter
By your Editor, George Wall

The Board met for their monthly meeting on March 7, 2012. Attending were George Wall, Tim Cullison, Haylie Hewitt, John Arnett, Eleanor Campbell, Joe Ford, Darnell Kirksey, Karen LaFrance, Jerry Theis and Andrée Tarby. Gail Bliss (future board member) and Kelly Wolff-Krauter (Arizona Game and Fish) also attended as guests.

After the meeting opened, Kelly gave us a good briefing on Horseshoe Ranch.

Here are some of the other highlights:

Membership is currently at 844 with 100 Friends—58 are Friends only.

Darnell Kirksey passed out the report of the Education Committee meeting of February 17th. A habitat program is being set up, a Speakers Bureau is being planned and several other things are in the works.

The picnic was discussed at length.

The General Membership Meeting was held on March 14th. Prior to the main program, Tom Hildebrandt gave a short dissertation on Horseshoe Ranch. This is the spot where we will be having our picnic. It was an informative talk and answered many of our questions.

David and Diane Reesor then gave a program on Australian wildlife. Their pictures were absolutely stunning. David then showed us the equipment he used to take his pictures—a huge camera and a flexible tripod. They also showed a short program on the fireworks display held in February at Lake Havasu City.

It was a well attended meeting with 46 attendees including seven guests two of which joined us as “Friends”.

Besides the Tres Rios Nature and Earth Festival held the 10th and 11th of March, some other things were going on the same day. On Saturday, March 10th, Donna Smith and Dick Fogle managed a booth at the Outdoor Arizona Expo held at Sun City West. They passed out flyers, newsletters and sold a few books. At the same time, Time Cullison, Joe Ford, Darnell Kirksey, Andrée Tarby of the Sonoran Audubon Society and Emily Morris of Audubon Arizona were teaching Girl Scouts about birds at Audubon Arizona Center downtown. 34 Girl Scouts, 3rd and 4th graders, participated in this event.

Marshall Esty and George Wall manned a table at the 2nd Annual Spring Trek at North Mountain Park in Phoenix on March 17th. Tice Supplee led the bird walk.

A Journey to Thailand
By Dr. Jerry Theis

I visited Thailand in Jan-Feb 2012 with Field Guides Birding Tours on a birding expedition, contributing to their tourism industry, a significant part of their economy. Thailand, “the land of smiles”, formerly Siam (final name change on May 11, 1949) is a country located at the center of the Indochina peninsula in SE Asia. It is bordered to the north by Burma (Myanmar) and Laos, to the east by Laos and Cambodia, to the south by the Gulf of Thailand and Malaysia, and to the west by the Andaman Sea and the southern extremity of Burma. Thailand is the world’s 51st largest country in total area and is the 21st most-populous country. The capital and largest city is Bangkok, which is Thailand’s political, commercial, industrial and cultural hub. About 75% of the population is ethnically Thai and the primary religion is Buddhism. Wats (temples) are visible throughout the country.

We flew into Bangkok, birded the hotel grounds and national parks near the city before flying north to Chiang Mai, our base for birding all the mountains on the Thailand/Burma border. The northern part of the country consists of the Thai highlands, with the highest point being Doi Inthanon at 8415 ft. Southern Thailand consists of the narrow Kra Isthmus that widens into the Malay Peninsula. The local climate is tropical (supporting beautiful orchids) and characterized by monsoons. There is a rainy, warm and cloudy SW monsoon from mid-May to September, as well as a dry, cool NE monsoon from November to mid-March. The southern isthmus is always hot and humid. I did not participate in the extension, which was in the isthmus. Recent flooding was evident only by the water lines on buildings and the sandbag depots. Southern Thailand is naturally very wet due to shrimp farms, salt pans and rice paddies.

Thailand’s cuisine blends five fundamental tastes: sweet, spicy, bitter, sour and salty. Common ingredients in Thai cuisine include garlic, chilies, lime juice, lemon grass, and fish sauce. The staple food is rice, which is included in almost every meal, including breakfast. Thailand is the world’s largest exporter of rice. The only western foods we encountered were eggs (omelets, fried, etc.) at breakfast and spaghetti during field lunches.

Now about the birds of Thailand, the main reason we flew 24 hours to get there. Thailand’s position at an ornithological crossroads accounts for a rich country list of 928 species. Resident birds in the NW comprise a list with such names like minivet, parrotbill, fulveta, spiderhunter, mesia, minla, yuhina, iora, sibia, barwing, niltava, and scimitar-babbler. Closer to Bangkok, birds include babblers, laughingthrushes, broadbills, malkohas, flowerpeckers and tailorbirds. We saw well over 400 species, many of them easiest to see in Thailand, even though few were endemic. Highlights included the endangered Spoonbilled Sandpiper, and the Giant Nuthatch, Ratchetailed Treepie and Coral-billed Ground-Cuckoo.

In addition to birds, there are many other creatures in Thailand. Insects are prevalent, although we mostly saw only butterflies. People in Thailand enjoy insects as a snack food, often enjoyed with beer. Maybe this custom could become a Super Bowl tradition here! There are over 145 species of snakes in Thailand (45 poisonous). We saw only one, a small black-and-yellow banded variety, that bit our guide’s shoe on an owlimg evening. Of the 310 species of reptiles, we saw several huge monitor lizards, both river and forest varieties, as well as bedroom-friendly geckoes and a flying lizard. Of the 264 mammal species, we saw several deer (Sambar, Barking), elephants, Macaques (pig-tailed and long-tailed), the charming White-handed Gibbon, and the rarely-seen, nocturnal Binturong, a member of the Civet family.

Lastly, I would be remiss if I didn’t mention leeches. They are the most commonly mentioned scourge of SE Asia, especially during the rainy season. Several of our party were phlebotomized by these toothpick-sized leeches, each bite leaving a quarter-sized circle of blood. They particularly like feet and ankles so the best prevention is to tuck your pants into your socks, providing a thicker barrier. I also sprayed my upper shoes and socks with repellant and I escaped any bites. Leeches are present under leaf litter and even on bathroom walls in the national parks. Salt and cigarette lighters are the recommended measures to employ if a leech breaches your clothing barrier!

Backyard Bird Habitats
By George Wall

One thing that we as Sonoran Audubon Society members like to see are more birds and wildlife in the west valley. One way to do this is by providing habitat and promote conservation for wildlife.

In the coming months, I’d like to focus on some backyard habitats of members like the Scheuers’ article on the following page. If you have a habitat that has water, food, and shelter which are all necessary for attracting birds and wildlife, let me know. I would be happy to come to your yard, interview you and take some pictures for a future article. If the yard qualifies, a certificate from the Sonoran Audubon Society will be issued stating your yard is a backyard wildlife habitat.
Spotlight and Bird Habitats
By Eleanor Campbell and George Wall

Arlene and Alvin Scheuer, who are founding members of Sonoran Audubon Society, have resided in Phoenix for 41 years. Arlene, the birder and citizen scientist, has been interested in birds since her childhood on Long Island, New York, while Alvin, the photographer, has been an avid picture taker and movie maker since his youth.

They combined skills at their home at Sunburst Farms and have documented the breeding cycle of the Greater Roadrunner and Anna's Hummingbird on video. The Cornell Lab of Ornithology used them to help launch a new program called eBird. The Lab website's Great Backyard Bird Count Gallery this year includes their pictures of the Lesser Goldfinch and Verdin on page four.

Arlene is a lifetime member of the National Bird-Feeding Society and has been interviewed on their website. Clips of their video on the Greater Roadrunner family were included in the Arizona Game and Fish production of "Arizona Wildlife Views" TV series on PBS. Jim Burns, our local calendar photographer, visited their habitat to take pictures. The Arizona Republic newspaper featured them in an article on Project Feeder Watch and a photographer with National Geographic magazine contacted them for potential bird habitats.

When I visited their home and took these pictures (except for the Pyrrhuloxia), I was amazed at all of their cacti, flowering plants, and trees designed to attract birds in their front yard, backyard and side yard and they are firm believers in native plants.

They bought their house and two acres of land 40 years ago. They first had a lot of animals on their property, but in time they sold the animals and started in on designing their backyard habitat. In 1988, they got their yard certified by the National Wildlife Federation as a Wildlife Habitat. Their sightings which they enter into www.ebird.com contributes to research done by the Cornell University Lab of Ornithology. In their yard, they have two sensor cameras and they have taken as many as 700 photographs in one day. While I was there, the camera tripped and a picture of a Pyrrhuloxia was taken (shown here). This bird also visited them during the Great Backyard Bird Count and was the only one entered into the count from the Phoenix area.
Every year for the past several years, Phoenix has put on the Tres Rios Nature and Earth Festival. Several sponsors participate as well as our own Sonoran Audubon Society and this year was no exception. We have a booth as well as handle all the bird walks.

Manning the booth during the two day event were Eleanor Campbell, Gerry Horton, Nancy Kroening, Dawn Langston, Tom Lazzelle, Chuck Richard, George Wall and Rosemary Zanter. Besides passing out flyers, brochures and answering questions about birds, books and caps sales totaled $165.

The bird walks that started early in the morning were really a hit. Over 100 attended the walks and 66 different species of birds were seen during the day. Participating in the walks were John Arnett, Joe Ford, Frank and Sam Insana, Rich Kaiser, Bob McCormick who was in charge, and Andrée Tarby. A special thanks for also helping goes to USFS Wildlife Biologists Julie Camp and Greg Dunn.

One of our members, Andrea Nesbitt, who volunteers for the Adobe Mountain Wildlife Center shows off some of the injured birds they assist. The main feature was a Black-crowned Night-Heron. The Red-tailed hawk was just one of the birds seen during the day.
